Publishing Policies:

The journal publishes scientific research in Kurdish, Arabic, and English languages that contain the original scientific research standards in any of administrative, economic, accounting, legal, computing, technological, engineering, and the related fields. The journal accepts research that meets the following requirements and standards:

First: The research falls within the specific concerns of the journal.

Second: It should conform the regulations and standards adopted by the journal.

Third: The researcher should sign the Promissory Note and Declaration adopted by the Journal. (Declaration form is available on the website of the journal).

The research sent to the journal is subject to the preliminary arbitration before the editorial staff determines the validity of the research for external evaluation. In the absence of its suitability for publication, the journal will notify the researcher to do so. As for the research which will be given the preliminary approval, the research will be sent to two arbitrators to evaluate confidentially through filling a special form. The decision to accept the submitted paper for publication upon the recommendation of the external arbitrators. And it is based on two arbitrators in their decisions for research arbitration to what extent that the research relates to a field of knowledge as well as scientific and practical value of the results, the extent of the originality of the ideas of the research and its theme, and the comprehensiveness, accuracy and modern literature related to the subject of the research. The research integrity of the scientific method used in the research, the appropriateness of the data, the final results of the research hypotheses, and the correct regulation of the presentation style in terms of the formulation of ideas and the language of research as well as the quality the tables, figures and their clarity.

The editorial staff exerts tremendous effort needed to complete the arbitration process to reach a decision on each research so as to save time to the utmost. For this purpose, the journal is doing everything it can to use the electronic means of communication available. Then the researcher will be notified to provide notes to the evaluators. In the case of acceptance of research, the researcher will be informed the volume that the research will be published in addition to the expected date of it.
Delivery of Research Rules

1. Research is delivered by e-mail to the journal in soft copy or on a CD-ROM.

2. The researcher should send the promissory note in the abovementioned third point after filling the form with his/her signature attached by the research. The researcher should state that the research (the like) has not been published, it has not been submitted to any other journal and that he would not intend to submit for publication to any other journal.

3. The research should have the title page, the name of the researcher(s), scientific title(s), the employer, the address, phone number, e-mail and fax number (if applicable). To ensure complete confidentiality of the arbitration process, there should not be a researcher(s) name(s) in the body of the research, or any indication reveal confidential names. The researcher can mention acknowledgement and thanking phrases to the arbitrators or others who have contributed to the development of research.

4. The research should be written in a clear focused language with a scientific neutral style. It should not increase the number of research pages to 15 pages in Applied Sciences and 25 pages for Human Sciences including supplements of the research.
